

Our Companionship

On a bright Monday, as students at SMAN 17 Surabaya, we returned to school after a long break. We were returning as 11th graders. Metias, Faiz, and I were in the same class, 11-4. At first, we didn't know each other, but due to the large amount of homework, we got to know each other.

At first, we didn't know each other. But one day, there was a physics assignment that required us to work in groups. Since we sat close together, we started discussing the assignment, which was getting late. For your information, our physics teacher rarely comes to class. Once, at the beginning of school, our teacher was absent for a month. As a result, we struggled to learn physics at the beginning of the semester.

Chemistry was better than physics because we felt we understood it better and the teacher was good at teaching. We also often discussed chemistry. Other group assignments included Javanese and Indonesian. We were always in groups, so we were used to doing assignments. Every time we work together, we always have a joke to lighten the mood and have a good time.

It's been over four months since we first met, working on assignments and studying together. What started as an assignment led to a friendship.
