

The Wolf In Sheep's Clothing

Once upon a time, there was a sly and hungry wolf who lived near a green meadow where a shepherd took care of his flock of sheep every day. The wolf often hid behind the bushes, watching the sheep and dreaming of a delicious meal. But the shepherd and his brave dogs always kept a close eye on the flock, making it impossible for the wolf to attack.

One day, while wandering around the field, the wolf found the skin of a sheep that had died the day before. Suddenly, a clever idea came into his mind. "If I wear this sheep's skin," he thought, "the shepherd and his dogs will think I am one of them. Then I can easily walk among the sheep and choose my dinner without fear!"

So the wolf carefully put on the sheep's skin and walked slowly toward the flock. The real sheep didn't notice anything strange. The shepherd looked at him from a distance and thought he was just another sheep. The wolf smiled secretly — his plan was working perfectly.

When night came, the shepherd led the flock into the pen and locked the gate. The wolf waited patiently until everyone was asleep. Under the light of the moon, he began to move quietly, ready to attack one of the sheep.

But before he could do anything, the shepherd came into the pen, saying, "It's time to pick a fat sheep for tomorrow's feast." Without realizing it, he grabbed the wolf dressed in sheep's clothing and killed him instantly. Only then did he notice the truth — it was not a sheep, but a dangerous wolf in disguise!
